DEDICATION

To one whose fellowship and understanding have been ever present and generously offered . . . whose intellectual spirit and guidance have so freely been given to our problems . . . and whose sense of fairness, as a professor and a friend, has encouraged us to carry on, the WIGWAM staff deems it an honor to dedicate its 1944 issue to you, Dr. Margaret L. Johnson, with sincere gratitude.

FOREWORD

If this perchance with effort small
To you fond mem'ries will recall
Of deed and thought long since left dead
Within a worldly, busy head,
Then was our task worthwhile.

And if it brings a vision clear
Of incidents you treasured dear,
Of personages long since gone,
Or friendships true that still live on,
Then was this task no trial.

Or if beyond our fondest dream
This may recall a favorite scene
And strike the fancy or the heart,
It does to you our thoughts impart.
Then we are done and we can smile
And feel our efforts well worthwhile.

THE COLLEGE

The Richmond Professional Institute of the College of William and Mary consists of a group of professional schools and departments to which has been added a junior college of liberal arts and sciences.

R. P. I. is, as its name implies, a professional institute located in the central section of Richmond. The school offers a wide variety of programs extending not only through the usual four college years, but, in certain fields, into one or two years of graduate-professional work.

The Institute has its own faculty, its own campus, and a separately organized student life. The entrance requirements, like its objectives and purposes, are entirely different from the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg and other liberal arts colleges.

Class Prophecy

It's a new world . . . faintly in the misty background I can hear the stirring melody of the New World Symphony . . . yes, now I can hear it plainly . . . but this time there are no rolling cannons blasting forth their ugly loads . . . no, no screams of dying men and creaking artillery to shatter the breath-taking melody; there is nothing but peace in this land of ours, now . . . for this is the new world!

A dream, you call it? . . . perhaps not, but for the present won't you let me dream just a little longer? For, you see, I am dreaming of the future . . . a future twenty years hence.

It is an odd dream, for all along this path of the future I have met comrades of college days. It was back in the war days of '41 that I first met them. They were so young and gay, so idealistic and alive. Did war change them? Yes, a little . . . but it made them strong and courageous and determined; determined that it should not happen again! Determined to pursue the right . . . and they did. In two score years they have erased that word from the minds of men, for they have sons of their own; they brought sons into this world, this new world of ours, to carry on in their fields and professions, as they had done, only without the blight of war.

But the future is not so melancholy . . . in traveling this road I "had" to pause and tell you. For don't you see, "they" made this new world . . . and we have no more wars.

Oddly enough, as I traveled along the avenues of this new world of plastic street lamps, heliocopters, moving sidewalks, rocket ships, and television, I chanced upon a beautiful Arcade of the world of tomorrow. The Arcade in itself was appealing, but it was not until I had noticed a small plaque lost in the spaciousness of the edifice that I appreciated its significance to the utmost. There impregnated in the stone were the names of colleagues of the years gone by. With sheer amazement I uttered them audibly.

A lovely voice singing faintly in the distance leads me to a magnificent music hall. As I approach the spell-bound throng I feel a familiar noise inside . . . and then I recall the voice that I had heard ringing in the Convocation Chapel so many years ago.

Drifting on through the mixture of once familiar sounds and sights, a very professional looking woman approaches me. A hushed voice whispers that it is Hattie Talmkin, psychology professor at Harvard. Ann Gentry and Courtney Driscoll brush by too suddenly for me to stop them; everyone is revolving in his own little world too quickly to notice me.

One by one, I pick up the lost threads. Harriet Cooper, now a world renowned interior designer, rests against the art arch sketching pent house interiors. Agnes Houtman is back in Holland designing bigger and better windmills. Ann Doershuk, in collaboration with the Associate Architects of America is devising a plan to construct a square circle. Mary Sue Lowman, whose domestic achievements led her to the altar, is busy trimming a nursery.

There is a shriek in the distance and out from a bolt of fabric tumbles Sadie Anderson. Her full-time duty is whipping up little gardening aprons for Lady Astor. Hanna Bell rushes towards her canvas with the "Pollak-like" precision, to place the finishing stroke on her masterpiece of realism vs. modern art.

This must be the fashion corner, for there stands Lu Elwood and a mouth full of pins; there is a brief moment of silence. All of a sudden Jane Quinn appears with all the savoir faire of Hortense Odlum's women in fashion. The motor of her heliocopter idles on the roof while she whisks up a few designs for her Paris Salon. Demie Brown scurries by in a quickened executive strut to keep a transcontinental appointment with Lockheed's personnel director, Shirley Koeen. The subject under discussion is violation of the wage and hour law, for since post-war conversion, Lockheed is turning out more rubber garters than John Wannamaker is able to sell; or is that stretching it a point? Alice Lord and Mary Taylor, co-managers of Funderburk and Garvey, are bickering over a color promotion. Will it be Chinese check—er, poker dots? The weighty question is decided when Rebecca Spicer bursts into the hall of fashion with her latest creation of a duplicate bridge suit, in sing, sing stripes. Nancy Angell flies on the scene with her check book flapping in the breeze en route to the buying market. She is now head buyer of G. Fox and Co. and a sly one at that. Opportunity pecks but once and Marilyn Tickner has answered the call of Peck and Peck to open a chain in Denver, Colorado (the "a" as pronounced in raddish). Lenore Sussman stumbles across the way 'mid price tags and labels to the fashion department. It is her lot to coordinate and not coagulate lights, camera and action in the Sak's weekly fashion shows.

Out of the fashion world and into the frying pan, for there is little rest in the social whirl. The social workers continue this maddening pace and bleary-eyed I stand by. Dot Burrill adds an extra post in front of her post office experience, for her social work duties find her in charge of ten delinquent families. Squaw Helen Hall sits cross-legged in her tepee counting the royalties from her best seller, THE WIGWAM. During her leisure moments she works upon the sequel, Totem Pole. Josephine Harvey, who got all wrapped up in her case work, found that she had a case on her hands with a certain guy named Snead . . . charity begins in the home. Frances Danto, who set out to prove that there was a place in the world for women, finds it difficult to keep them in the home now. Doris Greenberg, who takes her social work seriously, if clocked would find that time spent in playing mahjung would equal the "x" quantity in the equation x=y. All of which goes to prove the law of averages. Margaret Greene and Betty Peters share like honors as sponsors as ten families each. Terry, Hutchinson, and Moody have set up social work agencies in the larger metropolises of Albekirk, Rangoon, and Peoria ready to serve morons, imbeciles, and the like.

Bee Goodwin, who starred in the class "Leisure Time Today," found that her Red Cross duties in Africa did not coincide with her text book: page five, line nine (in small print). Marion McLeod believes there is no place like home, but then again one doesn't often have Shaw Field adjoining one's back yard. Betty Tucker, that blazin' beauty, was called back by special request after graduation to join the dental corps of the Waves . . . or was it just the Navy? Mary Anne Hallmark, who graduated with highest honors in tit-tat-toe, is now running, after years of research, for the first place in the national doodling contest.

All play and no work makes Miss X. RPI a dull gal; so we had better dash over to the Killum-Cureum Laboratories for observation, both objectively and otherwise. Dr. M. "Lu" Jackson, who at the present time is on leave of absence in Florida, with an acute heart condition, is the resident physician. Dr. Janet Holle, who so ably combines brains and beauty, is now interning in the lab. She prophesies very little future in her present salary of fifteen dollars per month. Her co-workers are eight lab technicians and what a bunch of "stickers" (notice, the "n" is silent like the "k" in spaghetti) . . . If you feel neurotic, chaotic or even exotic you are a likely patient. "Little Did I Know When I Met You" . . . that you had a hypodermic in your other hand. Mildred Wagner, an expert at tracking down the hows and wherefores of hay fever, recently suggested that the versatile staff produce Noel Cowherd's play, of the same name, for the benefit of the patients. The bed-ridden audience expressed their appreciation by giving her the book entitled, The Hows and Wherefores of HUMAN Behavior." Roberta Trow finds needle point work very interesting, when not engaged in her technical duties. Collin Choate spends many happy hours chasing food particles through the blood stream. Psychologically this might be explained by the fact that early in her childhood she was inspired by the Nancy Drew mystery series. Dare Shirkey, who found the name Phipps more pleasing, does not shirk her duties while her husband is away, but spends much of her time in the Killum-Curem Laboratories. From Jean Roberts, the able assistant of Dr. Holle, we expect great things, for she is soon to enter McGuire Hospital.

It is the duty of Virginia Ramsey to tone down the screams of the local yokels when the hat-pin stickers swing into full action. A casual observer might think it a tattoo-er's den. It is to her that the dignity and charm of the Killum-Cureum Medical Center may be contributed. Mary Frances Terrell, who quite frequently runs around in circles, attributes this habit to the many years she spent at Stuart Circle Hospital. Before affiliation with the present laboratory, Nancy Tignor spent many months working on her technique at the Virginia Medical College Hospital. The Medical center would not be complete without the mentioning of the P.T. twins, Martha Holmes and Elayne Goldman. It is only through the endless efforts of these Physical Therapy majors that the patients of the medical center turn their kinks into curves and their calluses into corns. The medical profession is indeed grateful for that excellent University of Virginia technique. On the follow-up is the Occupational Therapist, Rena Graham, whose business it is to busy the fingers of doodlers, thumb twirlers, wood whiddlers, and the like. Virginia Stone floats about the Laboratory in the garb of the Angel of Mercy, spreading hope and good cheer in her path.

A vibration of voices and sounds once more penetrates the Arcade and I turn slowly first in one direction and then to another. All around me are revolving spheres of human activity meshing and synchronizing into a pattern of worthwhile professions. Faintly the sweet strains of music of this new world float earthward from the dome of the Arcade and suddenly I awake with the complete realization of our new world. There is no more pettiness and greed, for my colleagues have found their niche in this vast world of ours; so overpowering is their desire to create that the other revolving spheres act as to keep them in time with the beat of the New World Symphony.

The Dean's house lends an air of sophistication to the campus. Cares seem to vanish as you enter the luxurious halls. The Dean and Mrs. Hibbs are always our charming host and hostess, and the students anticipate the social events that take place at their home. The impressive columns . . . the massive doors . . . the spacious and lovely paintings are some of the things that we will never forget about the "Deanery."

Inter-Club Council

The Inter-Club Council is the other division of the two divisions of the executive department of the Student Government Association. The membership consists of representatives from all student organizations; the president and vice-president of the Student Council also serve in the same capacity on the Inter-Club Council. The boy's main function is to coordinate student activities. It performs such other executive functions as do not pertain to its governing regulations. The Inter-Club Council is the main business body of the school.

The Retail Club, under the sponsorship of Miss Katherine Bell, is now in its fifth year of existence. Its membership is composed of students majoring in Store Service. The club provides a means of promoting friendship and cooperation among the students, the faculty, and retail institutions. Social activities are combined with constructive work to make the club an asset to the department and the school.

With the closing of the year, the Cotillion Club once more binds a few pages of delightful memories in the Club Scrapbook. Though the dates on the calendar have long since been buried by the passing months, one does not easily forget the initiation by candlelight, the merriment at the Christmas party, and the thrill of the Fall and Spring Cotillion Dances.

The outstanding event of the Cotillion Club was the Mid-Winter Victory Ball. The gymnasium was transformed into a setting of springtime loveliness, with graceful damsels and gallant officers tripping the light fantastic.

With the closing of another year the Cotillion Club members bid a fond farewell and look forward to the dance sets of '45.

Girls' Glee Club

The Glee Club is open to all students who are interested in singing.

This year the Glee Club has appeared at the U.S.O., Ewart's Cafeteria, Convocations, and a Spring Recital.

MR. RAYMOND HODGES.....Adviser

For their fourth year the Theatre Associates again had a successful season. Naturally, with the lack of male talent on the campus, play selection was tremendously complicated.

"Ladies in Waiting" was a good head-liner for an opening and proved so effective that girls locked their doors after the performance.

The second bill was a group of one-act plays called "plays of our allies" because it included a Chinese, a Canadian, and a Russian play. These played four nights in the studio theatre.

Two other major performances followed including the hilarious Molier comedy.

The Art Students League, founded thirteen years ago, is one of the largest and most active organizations of the college. Throughout the year they have many varied and interesting activities, trips to New York and Washington, student exhibits, a costume ball, lectures by contemporary artists and round-table discussions.

The club was organized to fill the gap between the classroom and the successful artist, and to create a feeling of unity and fellowship among student artists.

Today many of the International Relations Clubs in foreign countries have had to be discontinued because of the war. We here in one of the last strongholds of democracy, America, should do everything possible to keep up the spirit of the I.R.C. However, our attention today has been turned toward the bettering of international relations in the post-war world.

Occupational Therapy Club

Occupational therapy is the newest addition to the courses offered at the Richmond Professional Institute. The enrollment has shown a heartening growth since the school opened in September of 1942. Students represent eight different states, including Virginia, and the island of Puerto Rico. The qualifications of these students range from a high school diploma to college degrees and varied experience in the business and professional world.

The school offers a course, approved by the American Medical Association, equally divided between theory and activities. The theory courses include medical lectures, anatomy, occupational therapy and rehabilitation, psychology, and elective courses selected from other departments. The activity courses include weaving, woodworking, leatherwork, bookbinding, and other skills a student will find useful in her treatment of patients. Following a trend preceding the war but accelerated by it, occupational therapy is broadening its scope in the rehabilitation field.

Hickok House

Few passing down Franklin Street reralize the charm of our historic Hickok House, but we, the students of R.P.I., in our short years on the campus, have learned to love its Southern grandeur and wonder about the previous panorama of scholars who have passed in and out of its doors.

The Hickok House was built in 1855 and is the oldest building on our campus. The original spacious grounds, in the midst of which it stood during the days when it was a noble mansion, have since disappeared. The house shows taste of both the "war days" and the days of the "Gay Nineties." In restoring the building, the College has reserved much of its original charm by the simple Victorian decorations and authentic pieces of furniture that reflect the days in which the house was built.

The halls today ring with gaiety and there is a wild dash to make "that 8:45" and to avoid the night vigil of Mrs. Mosby.

Founders Hall "827"

Some people may think it strange that one becomes attached to a creaking staircase, an ivy-covered wall or a lovable old door frame; yet it is not strange that one cherishes a faded and curled gardenia nestled mid the pages, long since tied, in a scrapbook of yesterday. And after a lingering moment, that lifeless, unscented flower brings forth a lively and fragrant presence. It's very petals seem sensitive and radiant as they did that night . . . that beautiful night so long ago.

Now another year has passed, a year in which memories of teas and dances, studies and books, tears and joys . . . yes, and the lovable Mrs. Chalkley, are bound up to be encased within the leaves of this keepsake book. But whether recorded or not, thousands of grains of the precious sands of time will have to slip through the arrow glass before the happy remembrances of "827" will be forgotten.

By Bobbie Green with apologies to Matt Clark, in the Saturday Evening Post of March 22, 1941.

Founders Hall, in the 1870's and 1880's

This black and white drawing by Bobbie Green of the School of Art, is a copy of a colored illustration for "Sing for a Penny" by Clifford Dowdy, published in the Saturday Evening Post of March 22, 1941.

Matt Clark, the illustrator, came to Richmond and selected this building as an illustration for this scene in Mr. Dowdy's book. . . . The hero of the book had had difficulty with his wife and they separated. One morning he drove down Franklin Street in a brand new buggy with a fine blooded horse, and just as he came opposite what is now called Founders Hall, the errant—that is, his estranged wife—walked out of the door. The hero expected to speak to her, but just as he attempted to do so, she opened her parasol and interposed it between them.

Don't Depend on Eros

Here's hoping that every alumna of R. P. I. may, in good season, "middle-aisle it" with a well-to-do and devoted spouse who will surround her with dependable, life-long security.

Meanwhile—just in case "Prince Charming" shouldn't show up—let her remember that the systematic, foolproof savings plan offered by this company enables the employed women most conveniently to consolidate her independence.

" . . . Till Death Do Us Part!"

Rarely does the average man think beyond those tragic words, "... till death do us part." Little do these words reveal to him obligations to be fulfilled. A man may keep the solemn vows of his marriage contract as long as he lives—but does his obligation end there.

It would have been much fairer to his wife and children if some definite provision had been guaranteed in his marriage contract to insure their security in event of his premature death. By every law of love and right and justice, wife and children come first. Do not fail to provide for them.

You can create an estate for your family immediately with life insurance. It is the easiest, quickest and surest way for a man with a moderate income to create an estate for his loved ones.
